"Despite the effects of the climate emergency becoming more present in our everyday lives, we already know it is likely to be a challenging COP in terms of the negotiation outcomes. Meanwhile however we must not miss the opportunity to raise awareness and encourage the private sector to take decisive action. Banks plays a critical role and need to look at greatly reducing the greenhouse gas emissions of loans and funds' investments, using a science-based targets approach."

"I believe economic inclusion and in particular levelling up access to finance is a key catalyst for gender parity. With the rising focus on Sustainability from investors as well as governments and regulators recognising the tremendous opportunity to incentivise the female economy, we have seen a lot more proactive engagement from financial institutions and other capital providers in this space."
